THE GREATER WHEELING IS NOW THE CRY.

The Selection of a Secretary for the Wheeling Board of Trade
Means the

INAUGURATION OF CAMPAIGN

For the Greater Wheeling Simultaneously With the Entrance of the New Century.

The announcement that the Wheeling board of trade's committee on organization has decided to recommend W. S. P. Thompson, late of the Duluth chamber of commerce, as secretary of the board, with the unofficial title of "boomer-in-chief" for Wheeling, was received with satisfaction by the business men and manufacturers of the city. The committee has spent a great deal of time in looking over the field, but it has not been time lost, for the committeemen are confident they have secured the services of the man best fitted to head the campaign for a Greater Wheeling soon to be inaugurated by the new commercial body. Needless to state, when Mr. Thompson makes his debut at the public meeting scheduled for the Opera House on the night of November 30, he will be greeted by a large and surely representative audience. At that meeting he will outline his ideas for Wheeling's future advancement, and it is anticipated that his talk will infuse genuine enthusiasm into every hearer.

The primary object of the board of trade campaign will be to bring new industries to the Wheeling district. This, naturally calls forth the inquiry, "Where will new concerns locate?" Business men with whom the Intelligencer has talked unite in the opinion that Wheeling's industrial expansion must be northward or southward—or in both directions. Up the river along the line of the Potomac railroad, in the vicinity of Glenn's run, there is an abundance of ground suitable for sites for manufacturing, and there are reasons which would seem to indicate that the city's expansion will be largely northward. To begin with, the Wheeling locks and dam to be built at McMechen will give a uniform stage of six feet of water in the Wheeling harbor and extending to and beyond the Sisters Islands. Again, it is considered only a matter of a year or two until the proposed Wheeling & Wellsburg electric railway is built, giving the river-front territory between the two towns convenient and cheap access to Wheeling. Thirdly, by tunneling through the hill back of the Top Mill the Wheeling Terminal could build a branch that would give factories at Glenn's run as good shipping facilities as are had by any plant in Wheeling or the over-the-river towns. Fourthly, there is good coal to be had from the hillsides within a few yards of the sites of these factories, and of course coal development would follow the location of industrial plants.

Wheeling will also expand to the south in the vicinity of Glendale, in Marshall county, where the advantages are second only to those at Glenn's run.

Back of Bellaire and below that town there are numerous sites available, and the Bellaire board of trade is endeavoring to interest manufacturers in the advantages of that section of the Wheeling district. That the board will meet with success is shown by many indications.

Martin's Ferry, too, can offer some excellent mill sites, though the property in the vicinity of the Aetna-Standard mill is held at a very high figure.

General Manager George Heard, of the Natural Gas Company of West Virginia, was down from Pittsburgh last night, and was greatly interested in the forthcoming campaign of the board of trade for a Greater Wheeling. He enthusiastically commented on the possibilities of the Wheeling of the future and opined that with its wonderful advantages for the manufacture of iron and steel cheaply there would be no limit to what could be accomplished here. He said he would assist the board in every way possible in making the city's advantages known far and wide.

In answer to an inquiry, Mr. Heard said his company is now fortunately well off in the way of a reserve supply of natural gas, assuring gas for domestic consumers here for many years to come. "You people here don't know how close an escape you had five years ago when we succeeded in having the city council allow us to charge eighteen cents a thousand instead of fifteen cents net," said Mr. Heard. "At that time we had exhausted the old Hickory field and our reserve had been spent in fruitless endeavors to develop another prolific gas field. Our stockholders were in a mood to throw up their hands and abandon the Wheeling field, when would have meant a return to the dirt and labor involved in the use of coal as fuel. However, when they were given the right to charge more money for the gas—not more, though, than is charged in most other towns—our people stuck together, went down in their pockets deeply and continued the efforts to develop a new field. At last success crowned our labors in Greene county, and now we have enough gas for domestic consumption in Wheeling for a long time to come."

Mr. Heard strongly opposed what he terms the disgracefully wasteful use of natural gas on the Wheeling district mills. Here the natural gas is used to fire boilers in nearly all the mills, as well as in the heating furnaces. In Pittsburgh, however, the mill people use coal for making steam and limit the use of natural gas to heating furnaces and open hearth furnaces. The Carnegie Company has its own gas field in Greene and Wetzel counties, also its own pipe line, and the supply apparently unlimited, yet it uses coal for the boilers, simply because it is not a good business proposition to waste the gas, which must sooner or later become exhausted, while coal, as is inexhaustible. The Carnegie Gas Company, by the way, sells its gas to the Carnegie Steel Company at ten cents a thousand—sort of changing your money from one pocket to the other—but the idea is that the gas is worth that price, and if the use of coal involves a lower cost then coal gets the "right of way." In the Wheeling district, the Wheeling Natural Gas Company sells gas to the mills at from six to ten cents a thousand, according to quantity used. This company has been very fortunate in developing a field of remarkable richness and staying qualities in southwestern Greene county, and it is said there is enough gas in sight to insure a supply for the mills in this district for years to come.

Wheeling's domestic consumers of natural gas use 7,000,000 feet a day during the winter. About 7,000 feet of natural gas is equal to a ton of coal in heating capacity, so it will be noticed that if Wheeling were cut off from natural gas there would be an immediate added demand for 1,000 tons of coal per day—or thirty-three car loads. The mills, it is said, use much more than all the domestic consumers.

Yesterday's Fire.

Shortly before 7 o'clock yesterday morning an alarm of fire from box 24 summoned the department to the corner of Twelfth and Main streets, where dense clouds of smoke were seen issuing from the People's bank building. The department responded promptly, and upon investigation they found some rubbish burning in an ash vault in the cellar of the building, caused probably by some person throwing hot ashes into the vault. The fire was extinguished before any damage could be done.

Delightfully Entertained.

Miss Kate Knope delightfully entertained a crowd of her friends at the home of her parents on South Chapline street last evening. The affair was the result of an election wager, in which the winner entertains at her home at the expense of the loser. Dancing and cards were the diversions, and at a late hour a toothsome luncheon was served.

Main Street Runaway.

Yesterday afternoon the horse attached to the delivery wagon of Trueschel & Co. became frightened and dashed wildly up Main street. Just above Fourteenth the runaway dashed into the delivery wagon of Kirchbach & Helmbright, standing at the curb. The Kirchbach & Helmbright rig was slightly damaged, and the horse injured.
